D. BACKGROUND AND EXPERIENCE
Please briefly present the partner organization.	The Institute for Anthropological Research is a public research institute based in Zagreb, Croatia, that carries out scientific, expert and educational activity in the field of anthropology as a medical, natural, biotechnological, social and humanistic science. Researchers at the Institute have different basic education (medical doctors, molecular biologists, archaeologists, social anthropologists, forensic scientists, psychologists, chemists, etc.) and are oriented towards anthropology during their PhD studies or through their research projects. Such diverse profiles of the Institute's staff allows inter- and multidisciplinary in designing and implementing research. The Institute's activities are funded by Croatia's state budget, and national and international foundations and programmes, such as

	National Institutes of Health (USA), EU framework programmes for research and innovation, and others. Center for Applied Bioanthropology, as a part of the Institute, is a highly sophisticated, interdisciplinary center consisting of five laboratories (Laboratory for Molecular Anthropology, Laboratory for Evolutionary Anthropology and Bioarchaeology, Laboratory for Chemical Analytics, Laboratory for Microbial Ecology, Laboratory for Chemical and Biomedical Informatics), each equipped with top-end instruments. Research fields of the Center include molecular anthropology, evolutionary anthropology and bioarchaeology, analytical chemistry in anthropology, microbial ecology, human growth and development, aging and personalized medicine. The Center also offers professional laboratory services (specific laboratory analyses, forensic expertise, professional studies and projects). In addition to the scientific and professional services, the work of the Center includes education of students (undergraduate, graduate and postgraduate level), mentoring of graduate and doctoral dissertations, methodological training, public lectures, summer schools, workshops etc. Since its establishment, the Institute has been continuously striving for scientific excellence and global networking, it is connected with top-class leading organizations, and it is open for new collaborations in future projects.
What are the activities and experience of the organization in the areas relevant for this application?	Some of the research topics that are implemented in IA's research projects are: reconstruction of migration, demography, social organization and health based on genetic and skeletal material, determination of genetic and environmental factors underlying the development of metabolic syndrome and obesity, various topics in sociocultural anthropology, etc. Most of these research topics are studied inter- and multidisciplinary, holistically, and involve different population groups (e.g. past populations, isolated populations, mothers and newborns, adolescents, elderly, Roma populations, etc.). Experience and interests: <ul style="list-style-type: none">→ Primarily engaged in research and study of the population structure;→ The Institute possesses rich biobank and human skeletal collections;→ Organization of International Conferences and Symposia, Study Abroad programs, Workshops;→ Research work with five interdisciplinary laboratories;→ Focus on anthropological studies from diverse perspectives;→ European Research and Innovation activities, Coordination and Support activities;→ Active work with young people (volunteers, domestic students), PhD students and Erasmus+ students;→ Popularisation of Science→ Etc ...
